

Artist Statement

Interdisciplinary visual artist | Nigeria

Memory carried across image, sound and space.

My practice explores how identity is shaped by ancestry, memory, spirituality and contemporary African experience. I begin with drawing and digital illustration, creating symbolic images that move between personal reflection and collective history. Moving image, sound and augmented reality extend selected works through time and space.

I use technology as a storytelling material rather than a spectacle. It allows physical artworks to carry movement, voice and responsive layers while remaining at the centre of the encounter. Across exhibitions, film and collaborative projects, I build visual systems that connect traditional image-making with immersive media.

The work asks what we inherit, how cultural memory survives and how art can create meaningful exchange between people. I aim to develop this practice through public presentation, curatorial dialogue and international collaboration.
